

1. Problems, Needs, Target Users, Importance, and Expected Effects

☐ Problems and Needs

Online sellers must check various laws and policies before launching and selling products, including the Electronic Commerce Act, advertising and labeling regulations, personal information protection rules, online sales business registration, product-specific licenses, and platform-specific sales policies. However, this information is scattered across different laws, government guidelines, and platform policy documents, making it difficult for beginner sellers and small business owners to understand everything at once. As a result, problems such as registering prohibited products, using misleading advertising phrases, or missing required product information may occur.

☐ Target Users

The main users of this service are online shopping mall founders, small business owners, individual sellers, and sales managers at small and medium-sized companies who need to check compliance risks before selling products. This service is especially useful for sellers who operate on multiple platforms such as Coupang, 11st, Naver Smart Store, and Gmarket, or those selling highly regulated products such as health supplements, cosmetics, electronic goods, medical devices, and imported products.

☐ Importance of the Problem / Background

As the online commerce market grows, anyone can easily start selling products. However, lack of understanding of laws and platform policies can lead to product suspension, advertisement rejection, account restrictions, consumer disputes, and administrative penalties. In particular, platform policies and product-specific regulations differ by sales channel and product category, so sellers now need not only product registration skills but also preliminary compliance review capabilities.

☐ KPI or Expected Changes

This service helps sellers quickly check the legal and policy requirements before launching a product. It also allows them to review product descriptions, sales eligibility, and advertising risks in advance, reducing compliance risks.

Expected effects include:

- Reduced time required for pre-sale compliance review
- Lower advertisement rejection and product registration failure rates
- Reduced possibility of violating laws and platform policies
- Lower entry barriers for beginner sellers
- Improved platform sales stability and operational efficiency
